Masters on the Mountain 12

Masters on the Mountain 12, in April 2002, was a seminal event in the history of martial arts seminars. Our guide, Willem de Thouars, conducted the expression of his life's work by a chorus of inspired disciples and friends.

STEWART LAUPER AND DAVID AYERS AS USUAL SET an example by making contact and impact—expressions of communal solidarity.

Janet Gee taught us how to imbed the tiger's natural movement in our unconscious reaction.

Philip Sialas led us into the upside-down apprehension of the monkey and showed that it is possible to have unstudied response without thought.

Keith Moffitt and Chuck Stahmann respectively taught us the body mechanics for knife and barehand, in the demanding logic of kun tao silat transmitted to them by Willem over several decades.

James Painter taught us how to find momentum and acceleration in confined spaces (like a prison cell) in his prison rock'n'roll, as well as jiu jitsu without dogma.

Other teachers, like Bear Roberts (jiu jitsu) and Frank Broadhead (Wu tai chi) rounded out the program with movements you could take home.

But most of all, Masters 12 was about expanding the limits of mind and consciousness as Willem de Thouars in an extremely rare display revealed more about the energy mechanics of a human in life, movement, health and healing.

No wonder—without outside fanfare—he is known to us as “the Magus of Denver.” There will be a special volume added to the Masters on the Mountain 12 video of Willem's practical applications of healing, and for the first time, advanced practices of mind and breath control uniting yin and yang. ☯
